Heritage Trees of Scotland

The essential book for all who love trees and all who love Scotland

Lavishly illustrated, it celebrates 100 of Scotland's most special trees – the ancient, the tallest, the widest, the rarest, the weirdest, the loveliest and those with important historical and cultural associations.

It is written by Donald Rodger, a woodland consultant with a life-long love of veteran and heritage trees, assisted by Jon Stokes of the Tree Council and James Ogilvie of the Forestry Commission Scotland. Photography by Archie Miles and Edward Parker, two of Britain's premier tree photographers.

“Heritage Trees of Scotland” is a companion volume to the Tree Council's “Great British Trees”, published to commemorate the Queen's Golden Jubilee in 2002. It grew out of Treefest Scotland 2002, a year-long festival of events celebrating Scotland's trees, woods and forests, and the “Heritage Trees of Scotland” Internet promotion held as part of Treefest and still presented on www.treefestscotland.org.uk
